

Thank you to all the EA members who have contacted the office expressing their concerns over the staff's well-being during these very difficult times in the Twin Cities. Elaine lives close to where protests have been held but her St. Paul neighborhood has been thankfully quiet. Sandy, Claire and Carleen all live outside the immediate cities of Mpls/St. Paul and are safe as well.

When the pandemic began, the St. Paul EAI office moved to working remotely. Governor Walz has begun to re-open businesses across the state as of June 1st. EAI will continue to operate with some staff working in the office during their regular part-time hours and others coming in one day per week and otherwise working remotely as well. This allows for maximum social distancing and still getting the important work of EAI accomplished.

We are grateful for everyone's emails and calls. The issues that began in Minneapolis have spread throughout the nation and now more than ever we need the principles that the EA program holds dear as we navigate to a new tomorrow - both in terms of how we treat each other as human beings and how we address the ever-present virus.
