

Emotions Anonymous International 2024 Annual Report

Remind me that my program offers me a blueprint for positive action.

— Meditation for Today,
Today book, February 18th

From the Board of Trustees President, Paul N.

Another year in the books, another year of recovery! After a period of many of our members connecting online through virtual groups, I have been encouraged to see new inquiries about starting in-person meetings over the past year. Having both options available at as many times and in as many cities/time zones as possible serves our membership well. If you feel a calling to start a new group, please visit the website (emotionsanonymous.org) and under the 'Service' tab, click on 'How to Start a New EA Group' to find out more.

As always, our administrative office has done a lot with moderate resources over the past year. While our literature sales were down 8% and group donations declined by 34%, an 8% decrease in expenses, combined with a one-time estate gift helped the organization to increase its financial safety net from a very low level the year before. Even with this stabilization, EAI only has six months of reserves on hand. Considering the significant losses EAI has seen in prior years, this is not a significant cushion. Given how many groups are online today versus five years ago, it can be easy for members to let their $1 or $2 per meeting donation slip away. If you are able to contribute, you can now give monthly on the EAI website. Just visit the website and click on the 'Donation' button and it will provide the option of donating monthly.

They say it takes a village to raise a child. I believe it will take a village to keep EAI going for another fifty years. All of us in the program have different strengths, whether it is having the spirit and commitment to start a new meeting or sponsor, the interest in becoming a board member, the writing and editing skills to serve on the literature committee or the gift of sharing a part of ourselves in each meeting we attend. We all have something to give and our contributions, in tandem with the hard work that the people in the EAI office put in, will ensure that the program keeps moving forward to serve current members and potential members who are experiencing pain and don't know that the program is here...yet!

Literature Committee Report

This year the EA Literature Committee worked hard to complete reviews and edits on a couple important pieces, including the new “Courage” pamphlet and the “Holidays and Special Days in Recovery” workbook. We also made great progress toward pulling together the first rough draft of the upcoming new book on the Twelve Principles. We received submissions from more than 30 EA members around the country (thank you!) and held a special meeting last winter to create the final structure for the book. Special thanks to several very active members, including Kathleen, Erin, Sharon, and Greta, who have made a solid effort to initiate or complete literature this year. But we need you too! If you’re interested in joining the Literature Committee, contact Colleen at coyne2003@hotmail.com.

Please inspire my words today and let them be an expression of good.

From the Executive Director, Elaine Delavy

How do the years go by so quickly? We had a staffing change here last summer—Claire went back to school and we welcomed Molly to EAI. She’s been a terrific asset, managing the order processing, updating meeting information, fielding member questions, recording donations, and generally keeping things going all around. We’ve introduced new items (“12 Steps” and “Just For Today” posters), added a few pamphlets, revised the “It Works If You Work It” book, and continued work on a new book focused on the 12 Principles.

We hear regularly from people who are so grateful that this program exists and we do our best to accommodate requests—whether for new materials, changes to the website or meeting locator, or how we communicate. We continue to fret about our budget—we were fortunate to receive an estate gift last year, which provided enough cushion to end this year with a positive balance—only the second time in the last decade we could do so.

I’m so proud of this little organization—truly, when I took this position (9 years ago!), things were bleak. We’ve turned around and continue to support groups and individuals throughout the world as they work their program. I appreciate the willingness of members to help out when I ask—special thanks to our Board of Trustees for their support and work. My future plans include trying to find new ways to reach more people—help get more meetings started, generate more awareness of the program, and continue to work with the Literature Committee to provide new and fresh materials to make the program more meaningful for all.

Pamphlet History

Have you ever wondered which pamphlets were written first in EA?

The Yellow Pamphlet, written in 1972, contains 72 tools for recovery. These guidelines give the community a solid foundation.

To My Family and Friends, written in 1974, talks about the importance of how successful recovery means having conversations with our family and friends and how practicing anonymity and confidentiality does not mean being ashamed of being in EA.

Other early pamphlets include:

1991 - Resentments

1993 - Love & Perfectionism

1994 - Depression

1995 – Grief & How Our Meetings Work

How To Get Involved

There are many ways to become more deeply connected to EAI. You could:

- Start a new EA group (in-person or online)
- Offer to be the first or second contact person for your group
- Find ways in your area to share a free informational flyer (#36)—consider asking to post at doctor’s offices, library bulletin boards, community centers, coffeeshops...
- Join the Board of Trustees (applications open every spring)
- Send in a reflection or write copy for a pamphlet
- Join the Literature Committee
- Sign up to reach out to newly established groups to help them get started successfully
- Make a one-time or sustaining donation to help keep EAI going
- Add EAI to your estate plan
- Encourage your group members to donate on EAI’s website
- Consider becoming a sponsor or co-sponsor
- Attend or help organize a retreat in your area
